Extensive guideline! Its such a great go through. It is definitely basic but surprises in the 50 % of the pdf. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

Moreover, once the parties make such determinations, they may have limited applicability because international agreements generally are only legally binding on countries that are parties to the agreement. For example, the 1996 Protocol to the Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matter (also known as the London Protocol) generally prohibits the dumping of wastes or other matter into the ocean except for the wastes and matter listed in the London Protocol and for which a party to the agreement has issued a dumping permit that meets the Protocols permitting requirements. In 2006, the parties to the London Protocol agreed to amend the Protocol to include, in certain circumstances, geological sequestration of carbon dioxide in sub-seabed geological formations on the list of wastes and other matter that could be dumped. However, only the 37 countries that are a party to the London Protocol and who have not objected to the amendment would be legally bound by it. In two instances, the parties to international agreements have issued decisions but not amended the agreements regarding the agreements application to ocean fertilization, including research projects. Generally these decisions by the parties are not considered to be legally binding, although they would aid in interpreting the international agreement. Specifically, the two instances are: Over the course of the last 2 years, parties to the Convention on the Prevention of Marine Pollution by Dumping of Wastes and Other Matters and the London Protocol to the Convention have decided that the scope of these agreements...
