By statute in Virginia, trespass for mesne profits of land recovered in ejectment, survives against the defendant s representatives. Lee v. Cooke, Gilmer, 331. After judgment for the plaintiff in ejectment, trespass for the mesne profits, without proof of an actual trespass, does not lie against one who was no party to the suit when the judgment was entered. Alexander v. Herbert, 2 Call. 508. In Maryland, a recovery in trespass for the mesne profits is only for die use and occupation of land, and does not bar an action of trespass qua re clausum fregit, for injuries done to the premises during the same period. Gill v. Cole, 1 liar. J. 403. If the plaintiff can...
